THE YEN TO ROAM

The perspective is blurred when one is too close to the picture and therefore it seems necessary now and again to wander to other fields and find out what is doing.

Every so often the impulse to go to Martinez seizes men and although I cannot say I am overly fond of the town I yielded to the feeling yesterday and spent most of the day browsing around there.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Way back in the years I knew Thomas D. Johnston, but not as judge, but Tom Johnston, so I thought it meet and proper that I call and pay my respects to the man who had donned the ermine since our pathways last met. In the old days in Richmond, Johnston was a slender, young fellow weighing in the neighborhood of 120 pounds while I carried pounds in excess of 250. Time reverses many things including weight and the portly gentleman whose hand I clasped did not resemble much the young lawyer of 25 or more years ago. On the other hand Father Time has done some carving on my frame and therefore I was not recognizable to my former acquaintance. However we eventually agreed that we knew each other and spent a pleasant period reviewing early days in this industrial burg.

OLD-TIME GEOGRAPHY

While in the judicial chambers the judge showed me a geography of the vintage of 1814. It was an interesting book and varies in many particulars from the tomes which treat that subject today. In looking over the pages I came to the conclusion that geography meant much more in that early period than it does today, for that little volume covered a variety of subjects ranging from the locations of countries, states and cities to a treatise on electricity and how it could be used successfully in the cure of several diseases.

The judge had some law books of the torts but they were modern in comparison with the geography and knowing he was a busy man I made my departure.

Then cruised around the town and managed to pick up considerable information of one kind and another. As usual the topic of most interest was the grand jury, what it was doing and what it is going to do. If there is one place in the county where one can get "inside" information on the inquisitorial body that place is Martinez. Of course it is not always accurate, but by and large some truth always seems to filter from the grand jury room to the outside.

ALL FLUTTERED

Just now Martinez is all agog over the policy of the grand jury in insisting that there shall be a cleanup out in the courthouse of married women holding positions there who have husbands able to

BIG LINER SINKS IN COLLISION

NEW YORK. (Thursday) Jan. 3.—UP—Five men were missing early after the 45 year old Colonial liner Lexington, Providence, R. I., to New York had been split and sunk in collision with the steel freighter Jane Christensen of San Francisco.

All of the passengers—estimated between 100 and 120—were believed saved, but five had not been located more than six hours after the accident.

At midnight two U. S. Naval divers operating from two government salvage tugs began searching the main section of the hull for possible victims. Police had cut through a huge section of superstructure which was carried nearly a half mile by the swirling current without finding any bodies.

SEEK BODIES

Marine police searched the river in the glare of searchlights and flares on wharves.

Officials of the Colonial Navigation Company gathered with their lawyers and prepared for investigation by the U. S. Steamship Inspection Service due to begin this morning.

OFFICERS SILENT

Officers of the Christensen refused to talk except to government investigators.

Captain John Wickam of the Jane Christensen and his Quartermaster Oscar Osberg, who was at the wheel when the crash occurred were questioned for a time by police. Neither would make a statement for publication. Wickam's home is LaCenter, Washington and Osberg shipped from San Francisco.

CAPTAIN ASKS HUGE SUM FOR LOSS OF SHIP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 — UP—The Socialite captain of the rum runner I'm Alone today presented his bill to the United States for the sinking of his ship, his silk opera hat, his three suits of heavy underwear, and his seven cases of shingles.

Captain John T. Kandell, British veteran of the Boer war, World War hero, and no mortal explorer, said that when a coast guard shell sent the I'm Alone to the bottom six years ago it took along $2900 worth of his personal property which he listed item by item.

It also caused him to contract a case of shingles, which cost $1000 to cure, as well as giving him a reputation as a smuggler which has made it difficult for him to get a job ever since, he said.

The captain, who wears a wrist watch, shell rimmed glasses and a purple handkerchief in his breast pocket, testified before the International commission which will decide whether the United States is responsible to Canada for sinking the I'm Alone off the coast of Louisiana.

If the Right Honorable Sir Lyman Poor Duff and the Honorable Willis Vandever, justices of the Supreme Court of Canada and the United States, decide in favor of the former, the total bill will be $38,803, including $95 for the captain's gold watch, $11 for his silk opera hat and $15 for his "one pair of fine blue serape pants".

Suicide Given Final Services

Father M. Crotty officiated at the services and interment was in Rio Vista cemetery. Wilson and Kratzer had charge of the services.

Mrs. Brazil leaves her husband, Joseph, a navy yard worker and two daughters by a former marriage.

ELECTION DAY BRINGS REALIZATION OF DEFEAT

INSTALLMENT FORTY had been listed for challenge, and Election day. My wife and I and that threat a night long and cast our votes in the morning, and I and thousands who were ignorant of the obligation the cameramen and news their rights to decide that the self-reel operators—although I had come to stay at home, certain in my own mind that those PREPARE FOR WIN!

STAYED AT HOME done not beat and was prepared to

The rest of the day we stayed at home, expecting to rest, but the big I expected a worse defeat than the telephone kept ringing with messages, having failed to reach upon us safes from headquarters and other big "Literacy Lines." A few friends who had been to our house to see me and we would try to prove the thief. The election had been won by a campaign of character assassination and Merriam had permitted that the fight against frauds at the polls first preceeded that reported, soon going right on. We should show the people how Merriman failed to carry which I have not done. We had been to our home to see me and I knew what was being prepared. We thought it was going to be that way knew that every agency of corruption straight through. But soon it became evident that we had not yet had been marshallig its forces for enormous vote, and for a while there seemed a possibility that when the industrial districts of Los Angeles were turned front, we might get out in front.

THE LEAST I HAVE

I won't reveal the names of our friends or how they behaved. Sure I did to say, that my wife and I were the least influence persons in that company, and we were in the strange position where it didn't seem decent to say how we felt. If we could do the same, what would the other mourners think? But in my heart were things such as that I can and take my own care again! I can go and take my own care again! I can clean with my windows open!

Presently we had to bundle into our cars and make a tour of the radio stations. The National Broadcast Company had prepared a program at ten thirty. I was to have five minutes in which to tell the audiences of ninety-two stations, how I felt about being defeated for Governor of California.

A POOR SPORT

At the first of these stations Governor Merriman preceded me. We were supposed to speak from the same room, but this honor I refused.

END OF ELECTION STORY

To finish the story of the election its results: The official figures have not been issued as yet, but Merriman received about 1,300,000, I received 875,000, and Haight 300,000. It thus appears that Merriman is the minority Governor by a small margin. He and his masters will not fail to make note of that fact.

The day or so after the election, the Los Angeles Post stated editorially that I had charged frauds on its results. The official figures

ITALY FRANCE PACT PROTECTS AUSTRIA PEACE

ROME, Jan. 2 — UP—A far-reaching accord has been reached between Italy and France, guaranteeing the independence of Austria, and giving a general guarantee of peace in Europe.

Premier Benito Mussolini agreed to make a gesture of friendship and peace to Yugoslavia and the pact is to support a general independence with the adherence of Italy, Spain and Czechoslovakia.

It will become the first alliance known here today as General Chiang Kai-Shek, the Chinese leader, has now cast in his lot with the plan to start for Rome from Paris tomorrow to attend the ceremony. With it goes a large delegation from the Italian Foreign Ministry.

Mussolini was understood to have insisted on making the gesture to Yugoslavia only after the agreement is signed and delivered. It was reported to have telegraphed Laval in full connection: "Italy's road to Paris is not via France."

He also is reported to have told Laval: "Italy will make a gesture of peace to Yugoslavia only if it is only too glad to do so, but only after the agreement is signed."

Tension on political problems in central Europe has kept Italy and Czechoslovakia apart for years. At the height of the Nazi uprising in Austria last summer Italy massed troops on both Austrian and Yugoslav borders.

Austria meanwhile was reported to oppose any agreement to support her independence which had the guarantee of Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. The Austrian minister in Paris, Lothar Egger-Moellwald, reportedly told Laval Vienna wants France, in case such a pact is concluded, to accept a special military responsibility and presumably guard against the eventualty of an Italian invasion.

In Paris, the cabinet's decision that Laval proceed to Rome tomorrow was hailed as his greatest political accomplishment since returning to active participation in the French government last year. The visit is expected to end 15 years of strained relations between these two great Latin nations.

Huge Deficit Is Faced By State Warns Merriam

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—UP—Analyzing "fixed charges" which totaled more than 56 percent of the 1933-35 budget, Governor Frank Merriam tonight warned voters of the state that drastic efforts must be made to wipe out a $100,000,000 deficit facing the state for the two-year period beginning July 1.

"The state's finances are in a precarious condition," he said. "Despite every form of economy and even with the restriction and reduction in some of the functions of government, we face a deficit of more than $100,000,000 for the next two-year period based upon the income and expenditures for the last period."

"It is imperative that this deficit be wiped out if the credit of the state is to be preserved."

Victory. Other speakers today were Alvin L. Sturtevant, attorney of the sheriff's office, who spoke on the preservation of evidence; Chief of Police Stanford of Vallejo was scheduled to be a speaker but was unable to attend today and will appear at a later meeting.

He dwelt upon the boundaries of the six patrol districts he has established, announcing that his chief deputy, Ralph Harrison, will be a roving investigator contacting all field officers.

As the series of meetings progresses more detailed study will be given office set-up, including birth control, photography, radio, news, and broadcasting, with on call experts in the various lines scheduled to talk.

At tomorrow's meeting the speakers will be Harrison, who will discuss general topics.

PEERING through the gate, she saw a wild garden overgrown with brush that stiffered all but a few hardy flowers. Beyond, a forbidding pile of stone made her believe that her guess had been right and that this was the Del Sari castle.

She decided suddenly that, having come this far, it would be simpler to call on the Countess and let the letter go. She looked for a bell and, finding none, tried the gate. To her surprise, it was unlocked, and she went through.

"Pat, may I come in?" she asked, surprised.

"Mrs. Rogers, a friend of the Countess, whom I met in Rome."

"Oh," he mumbled, half to himself. "I see. Well, so long."

AFTER breakfast, Pat went to the writing room to compose a letter to the Countess. It was a difficult letter to write, however, and after the fourth attempt she decided to go out into the garden for inspiration.

Following a path, she found that it led to a belvedere built on the rocks overlooking the sea. Hundreds of feet below, the sun shone on the water and on the wooded slopes that came halfway up to the rocks on which the town was built. It was very peaceful, and Pat stood there for several moments, a feeling of intense calm stealing over her. It seemed ridiculous in such a moment that life could be difficult and dangerous.

Finally, she turned away and as it was still early, she was tempted to examine the town before tackling the letter again. In the light, the little streets were now full of a quaint charm. In several doorways, stout women stood, watching her pass, hands on hips, smiling. Through a tiny gate she caught a glimpse of a garden riotous with flowers.

Presently, she left the village behind her, following a rough lane. On one side, there was a sharp drop to fields and sea below; on the other, a steep, wooded hill. Wondering if the path led to the castle of Del Sari, she followed it, according to her guide book, must be in this direction, she went on curiously, and suddenly rounding a curve, she found herself in front of a large, iron-work gate flanked by high stone walls.

It is well to remember that a beautiful mortuary does not mean high prices, as this firm proves. With all the refinements and comforts to be found here, charges are never higher than the smallest incomes can easily afford. ## EL CERRITO NEWS

EL CERRITO, Jan. 2.—At a quiet wedding at St. John's church on New Year's Day, Miss Dorris Stevenson became the bride of Joseph Lewis. Mrs. H. P. Calvert, the bride's sister acted as matron of honor, the groom's brother, Frank Lewis was best man, and the bride was given away by her mother, Ross Stevenson.

Mrs. Lewis was educated in the Richmond and Oakland schools. Mr. Lewis attended St. Joseph's Academy in Berkeley. He is connected with the firm of Lewis and McElroy, wholesale butchers of Berkeley. The young couple will make their home at 208 Central avenue in El Cerrito.

ATTENTION MR. RIPLEY

Here is something for Mr. Ripley and his Believe or Not column. The boys of the fire department, their families and friends held a great big watch party New Year's Eve and everybody stayed sober. What do you think of that? It's a fact. The Chief said so on the cold grey dawn of the morning after.

The party was held at City Hall. All the boys were there, so were all their families and all their friends. There were games and dancing and at midnight a buffet supper, very elaborate, and this and that to drink too, but no one indulged too much. That is the fact that would interest Mr. Ripley and his fans. However, there was so much confetti all over the place and so many dishes to wash, that five members of the department worked on New Year's Day from 8 A. M. until 3 P. M. getting things all put to rights, but who cares, the party was worth it.

JOYOUSLY WELCOMED

Mr. and Mrs. William E. McDowell of Santa Fe avenue entertained at a large party on New Year's Eve. About 50 guests were present. A five-piece orchestra furnished the music for the dancing by which the last hours of 1934 were whiled away. At midnight a delicious supper closed the festivities and the new year was welcomed joyously with song and dancing.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By C. N. CHRISMAN, M.D.

Celebrations of the New Year
Customs and sayings that concern the holiday we call New Year's Day. They run through the centuries of several hundred years.

By WAY of diversion I have been reading about the customs and sayings that concern the holiday we call New Year's Day. They run through the folk lore, and festivites of several centuries.

They belong to virtually every country and are much the same in all of them. Always the favorite salutation of this festival day was, and is,

"Your Good Health!" Sometimes we find a note of rancor, as in the words of the essayist, Charles Lamb, who said the waning days of the old year always made him think of all the things he had said and done during the twelve-month; which is enough to put anyone in the dumps. He speaks of the departing year as "that regretted time" but most of us are glad enough to have it done.

There is usually something about a turning point that chucks us up, and at least makes us imagine that things will be better if we can start again. The common note of the New Year's Day celebration has always been one of festivity, of gift giving, of good wishes and much fun.

No doubt there were headaches the morning after, but it is worth it to give a hearty cheer to the day that was ushered in a season of happiness.

Another custom was that of preparing a pot of spiced and sweetened drink—"wassail"—from ale and fruit. Every one drank the wassail and cordially. "Wass hail," an old Saxon term, which means, "To your health." This term was gradually corrupted by usage to "Wassail" and the double flagon, from which the ale was drunk was called the wassail bowl and later became our loving cup.

This was in merry England, but everywhere there were feasting and drinking with food and drink that tested the skill of the cooks of every land. The "Gods" of Coventry, triangles of pastry filled with mincemeat, were fried in the streets for a half-penny to the poor, a pound to the rich.

In Paris, the push carts and head trays were loaded with rich bonbons and French pastry. Over the midnight hour, the streets were thronged with merry makers who ate the goodies and drank to health. In Scotland, ry eaves were filled with fruits and candied sweets. Scotch buns required the same with many eggs. Scotch wine was hot and spiced, and was drunk with a wish for "A good health and a happy New Year." A favorite pastime was to dance about in a circle and sing:

"Weel may we be."

"Ill may we never see."

Originally gift-giving was universal, whether a sugar loaf or a fat goose. Gloves were a favorite, later a sum of money became "glove money." When pins of metal were invented to take the place of wooden skewers, it was pins that were favored, and money to buy them became "pin money."

Many of the popular superstitions that center about New Year's Day were connected with food and health. The first person to enter your home after midnight should bring cakes or bread or cheese, or the year might find you lacking.

"Burning out the old year," was an English custom and meant a bonfire into which everyone threw old rubbish to insure new and clean things.

In Scotland, to the contrary, nothing must be thrown out, the matter how spoiled while the day lasted, lest the luck would enter. To carry a lamp or candle out of the house meant a death within the year.

Our own Dutch colonists in New York lifted beakers of egg-nog, rum punch, choice coffee, or old Madeira. Twelfth-tide cakes were popular the world over. It is a matter of history that on a New Year's Eve of 1795, one Scotch gentleman, long bedridden with the gout, was so refreshed and stimulated by "warm ale full of zest" which he shared with friendly neighbors, that he regained the use of his legs. This column cannot vouch for the story.

POOR GROOMING DEFINITE ABOUT BAD GROOMING

By JACQUELINE HUNT

MEN'S dislikes about feminine grooming and about the use of cosmetics are even more important to most of us than the things they look for and admire in women. Many a romance has suddenly terminated due to some bit of carelessness on the girl's part. Even if you are married, you should stop occasionally and ask yourself what he really thinks of you.

Most men are kind enough not to tell you what they really think, but they do not hesitate to tell a stranger about their pet dislikes. Here are some of them, lady: study them seriously and see how you might offend. Then, hereafter, pay stricter attention to the details of your grooming.

Hair comes in for most criticism. Men hate greasy-looking, stringy hair, and hair that is always hanging down in straggly ends about the neckline. Most men especially dislike kinky hair that is pined into artificial-looking marcelles or other close waves. Hedd this warning and keep your hair soft and shining, and wear it neatly arranged in wide loops and ringlets. And do not let so much as one straggle end escape.

If you are the type for straight hair, wear it straight. Uncared-for hands receive their share of protest. Not only do men like to see hands soft, white and velvety, but they like nails conservatively shaped and colored. Most men have a violent dislike for vivid nail polishes, at least for general wear.

One of the most conservative gentlemen I know, however, was heard to exclaim with delight recently over a pair of hands with deep clear skin and short snow tips. The lady wore a black evening gown with just a slight accent of red almost the exact color as her nails. From this we might conclude that if a girl's grooming is perfect, and if she is stunning in every way, a man is not apt to be too critical about her fingernails.

Most men like perfume, but it disturbs them during business hours. And they dislike an overabundance of perfume at any time. So use your perfume subtly, and it is one of the best weapons you have.

Men have decided opinions on women's clothes. Most men prefer "smart" clothes to pretty clothes with a lot of frills and trimming. Most men dislike the inexplicably tailored costumes that some women wear. Men prefer dark evening gowns (probably because they set off a woman's lovely shoulders and back to an advantage).

Many of the things that girls like would be discarded if men had anything to say about it. They especially dislike printed dresses, short veils, fur neckpieces, heavy bushy fur coats like muskrat or raccoon, big hats, berets and socks. Many men dislike very dark stockings or dresses that are long or short enough to be noticeable, and all men are disgusted by straps that show or slips that show beneath the hem of your dress.

We haven't talked about all of the dislikes yet, but our space is up and we'll have to save them until some other time.

Captain Biff Jones Is Not Worried Because of His Resignation From "Huey Long's University"

IN A STATE where football and politics are intricately mixed, it seems proper that the only "no" man in sight is an army officer.

Captain Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones, coach of Louisiana State's football team, got very annoyed at Senator Huey Long when the "notiest" football fan of them all insisted upon getting on the player's bench and giving the boys pep talks between halves. The coaches' nerves matter, but ordered Huey off the bench and out of the dressing rooms; then after the final game of the season he resigned. The Senator, who has always demanded an eleven that won every game, and this team had lost two by close scores, was not sorry to see Jones go.

However, considering that the Army Captain had brought Louisiana State from obscurity to national attention in two years, there may yet be repercussions. Biff himself is not worrying about a job, for his career—null-and athletic—has been one of singular dignity and achievement. He was graduated from high school in Washington, D. C., and entered West Point in June, 1914. During his undergraduate career he played as tackle on the football team and was elected its captain in 1917. Because of the war he was hurriedly rushed through his studies and then assigned to the air corps.

After the war he was assigned to West Point as an instructor in field artillery and assistant line coach under Major Charles Daly. In 1922 he served a short assignment at Fort Hoyle, Maryland, and then returned to the Point as assistant coach under Captain John McEwan. In 1926 he was selected as head coach and guided the service elevens through four years of successful seasons.

Beat two eggs until light and add three-fourths cup evaporated milk or light cream. Dip the sandwiches in melted butter. Garnish with parsley. Serve at once.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "My skin has quite a few blemishes, especially around my nose and chin. I do not think these are blackheads, since they are not black, but rather large and grayish. When I remove them, they leave large conspicuous pores. What should I use to tighten my pores?" —Joyce.

You should stimulate your circulation and improve the condition of your skin with careful cleansing with soap and tepid water. Use a complexion brush or rough wash cloth. You can make a simple astringent preparation at home by mixing equal parts with hazel and boric acid.

QUESTION: "My lips are very dry and they are covered with little wrinkles or up and down ridges. I cannot seem to find a lipstick that is soft enough to go on smoothly and evenly. Can you recommend a good brand?" —Thelma?

The fault does not lie with your lipstick, but with your method of applying it. Dry, rough lips should be stretched taut and massaged with camphor ice, lanoline or vaseline before you apply the lip color. Then apply the lipstick smoothly and get rid of the excess with a cleansing tissue. Moisten your lips and they will look smooth and naturally red. Apply a small amount of pomade or camphor ice during the day.

PROFESSOR: "I am wondering if it is correct to wear a hat with evening clothes at this time of the year. Betty H."

ANSWER: A hat is not worn with a formal evening gown, either summer or winter. The loose jacket has the smart new rolled collar and patch pockets.

New York—There is rather more than the usual between-season suspense. Guessing which way the cat is going to jump is mere child's play compared to guessing which silhouette will win in the immediate future. Better leave it to fate and take advantage of the present altogether delightful state of affairs which gives one choice of several silhouettes. Anyway, it seems reasonably certain that for day we follow the straight line, and when night comes our preferences rule. Many are going in for enormously wide hem lines, but the slim silhouette is a great favorite.

With the contrast theme so strong in hats for the resort season, applying both to color and media, velvet becomes a plausible candidate in further acknowledgment of this idea.

One way in which it appears is in entire crowns of draped velvet or velvet ribbon, in lively light shades such as turquoise, combined with a white or natural straw brim, leghorn or toyo. Sash effects which hang down at back or may be draped around the throat, scarf-fashion, are charmingly arranged on some of the French hats as a striking trimming. Mme. Agnes, for example, takes sapphire blue and poses it on cyclamen colored straw in a capeline.

At right of the column we show the use of metal lame in hats. The dinner blouse at the top is a fashion highlight, featuring a slashed back neckline. The tunic model suggests itself as perfect for the afternoon party, while at the bottom the tailored shirtwaist goes with a black velvet skirt. Metal with black or white is the mixture in the embossed metallic lame.

For the best results when making cakes use cake flour. If ordinary flour is used be sure to sift it three or four times.

When a recipe calls for sugar, use granulated sugar, unless specified otherwise.

So guests are coming to tea! Then how about making little sandwiches out of those homemade cookies, putting jam between two cookies?

In making omelets, you may use plain milk, cream or evaporated milk, or a thickened white sauce.

When laughter upsets the wheels of progress, try to understand that the children are honestly amused, even if you yourself do not see the joke. The quickest way to restore the situation to normal is by sanctioning laughter. "Have a good laugh, children, but don't forget to eat," cancels the need for furtive glances and suppressed laughter on their part.

That's just it. She'll never find out without trying. By now she should know that once a child is predisposed to laugh, she might as well try to stop Niagara Falls as try to stop him, for all the good it will do. The child cannot stop. Besides, he does not want to. It has become too exciting a game.

NO "BIG GUNS"

Neither the prosecution nor the state brings up its big guns for this preliminary spadework. Lloyd Fisher, defense counsel, who knows everybody in the county, questions the talesmen for his side, but lawyer Edward J. Reilly, Brooklyn criminal lawyer, will take charge of the case. Anthony M. Hauck, Hunterdon county prosecutor, examines the talesmen for the defense, but Attorney General T. Whentz of New Jersey will take over the prosecution when testimony starts.

Hauck said tonight it might be possible to complete the jury in the first hour of tomorrow's session. If so, Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh may testify before recess is taken for the day. The prosecution has not decided whether to have Lindbergh tell his story in one continuous narrative or calling him to the stand from time to time.

After the jury is completed, Wilentz will make the opening statement for the prosecution which will take about an hour. Then county surveyors will go to the stand to establish the location of the Lindbergh home on Sourland mountain.

Water District To Fix Streets

When Councilman Frank E. Tilner called attention to the bad condition of the sidewalks on Nevin, between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth streets, caused by the work of the water district, City Manager McVittie stated arrangements had been made for their repair.

Two applications for re-zoning of property were read at the meeting of the council last evening, and referred to the city planning commission.

completed a voyage from the west coast with a cargo of lumber for Baltimore. She was in New York awaiting instruction from her agents.

As marine police reconstructed the scene, the Lexington was steaming in the middle of the river. The railroad tug Elmira and the Christopher attempted to pass and in the momentary "traffic jam" signals of one boat to another were confused.

HIT LINER

The sharp steel prow of the Christopher swung. It bent into the starboard side of the Lexington with a grinding crash. The cabin walls were splintered. The freighter's momentum carried her nose deep into the other's side. When the Christopher withdrew she left a hole so deep that within a few minutes a great section of the Lexington split off and was carried more than a quarter mile away.

Passengers and crews rushed on deck. The crew assisted passengers to gather valuables from their rooms. Most of the passengers were calm.

support them. It is said that one department head, the rumbling and let out three women with married life, so that when a report is made, it will escape censure. Naturally there is adverse comment in the granite buildings where a number of married women are on the county payroll, but the general consensus of opinion is that the policy is entitled to commendation.

MORE RUMORS

Rumor also insists that one department's activities and expenditures since 1931 will be subjected to the scrutiny of an audit. Note that the word department, and not office is used. After the 7th there will be an audit of the books of the sheriff and the district attorney who go out of office on the 7th of this month. The audit, however, will cover only the period from June 30th, 1931 to January 7th, 1935. In addition, it is known that the sheriff and district attorney themselves insisted that such an audit be made as a matter of protection to themselves, and properly so. The rumor therefore, must, of necessity, refer to other than those offices. No names were spoken out in meeting and therefore developments must be awaited. In the meantime, the various committees of the grand jury are busily at work and reports are due now almost any time. They may prove interesting. * bonus bill. Leaders already have promised to let this measure come to a vote. Its passage is assured in the lower House but its fate is problematical in the Senate.

The bonus situation could be changed in the event the House Ways and Means committee reports a compromise proposal which does not appear likely now. President Roosevelt's letter a few days ago to a Texas Legislator indicated the administration would not compromise on this issue.
